GOV'T TO FIGHT FOR CONSUMER

The provincial government's department of consum services has come to the aid of a Vancouver man being sued for refusing to accept furniture he-ordered.

Better Value Furniture, a division of Value Industries Ltd., 6464 Fraser, has launched a suit against John Diomis. 6445 Elgin, claiming breach of contract.

For the first time the department's lawyers have opted to defend a consumer under a section of the Trade Practices Act which specifies that if the director of trade practices is satisfied there's good cause for defence or action is in the public interest, it may act.

The department will argue that the furniture firm made ceptive representations regarding the quality and character of the goods sold him.

The suit was initiated following Diomis' order for furniture with a list price of $3,000.

The Vancouver man paid $100 down on the furniture by way of a certified cheque and agreed to pay the rest on

In the interval Diomis decided against the furniture and he refused to accept delivery.

Trial date in Vancouver is expected to be set by the court

The program was started last fall to allow some leap-frogging when Canada Manpower reported 3,500 open jobs in Edmonton's office alone, compared to some 300 listings here.

Over and above the initial grant, Manpower was willing to pay for relocation of the family if the applicant suc-

Oil Cut-Off 'War'

Inflation' There'll be no great spending spree for a Victoria senior citizen who received a windfall of $2,000 Friday.

E. G. Woodman, who won the money n the final draw of the B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children, plans to put his prize away "to coverinflation.

total embargo of oil by the producing cartel "would be something close to nuclear warfare," Assistant U.S. Secretary of State for Economic Affairs Thomas O. Enders told a U.S. Senate subcommittee Friday.

Enders made clear that he thought a total shut-off of oil shipments by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is unlikely. But in response to questioning by Sen. Frank Church (Dem-Idaho), chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee multinational subcommittee, Enders said that "a 100 per

The state department official said that a total embargo would be "most devastating — it would be a total challenge to the industrial world."

He did not say - nor was he asked — what the U.S. response to a total embargo would be. It was clear from the context of his remarks that he was not suggesting a nuclear response, but was attempting to portray the extent of the impact on the industrial world of a total cut-off of oil by OPEC.

In such a situation, but not before, Enders said, there would be a need for the U.S. to share its domestic production of oil with other nations under a supply "safety net" agreement signed last November.

t The agreement sets up an International Energy Agency (IEA) including 18 major nations in Europe and Asia, but excluding France.

These countries agreed in the case of a selective embargo in which any country, or a major area (such as the East-ern regions of the U.S. and Canada) loses more than seven per cent of consump-tion, the other members would share the shortfall.

Kissinger, Faisal Talk Oil Prices

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger arrived in Saudi Arabia today to review Middle East peace talks and negotiate with King Faisal on long-term oil price

It was learned that one major oil producing nation already had expressed interest in Kissinger's proposals for a long range agreement to lower sale prices below $11 a barrel. The current price is between $10 and $11 a barrel. There was no information, however, on whether the country was Saudi Arabia.

Let's face it. You probably believe filling out your tax return isn't easy and all the talk in the world wouldn't convince you otherwise. But it doesn't have to be difficult.

Each year the Federal Government tries to make it easier for you to understand your tax form and to fill it out accurately and quickly. For instance, this year we've rewritten the Income Tax Guide to make it easier and simpler for you to use while you complete your return.

And, for most of you, the Guide will be the only Now, let's touch on the tax form itself. It's used,

Keeping the Powder Dry

In recent years, Finance Minister John Turner has done a neat juggling act alternately blaming inflation on world pressures and labor demands. Not that he should be blamed for such political ping pong as other North American politicians have been forced to play the same game. The job of tamping down inflation barely begins when recession rears its ugly head and government must deal with the new menace. In any case, it is good to see some candor emerging from Ottawa these days.

Turner is being very cautious about the possibility of a spring budget, although he now admits the depth of the U.S. recession exceeded his expectations and has forced the government to shade its employment and growth estimates. The finance minister had predicted 250,000 new jobs would be created in 1975. In the face of a 6.7 per cent adjusted national unemployment rate - in actual fact it's 8.4 per cent or more than 800,000 Canadians, out of a nine million-plus labor force, that are out of work - the opposition cries for a new budget with increased tax cuts to fuel the slowing economy. But the government is correct in keeping its powder dry until it can deduce whether or not the delicate balance of the November budget

Economists estimate there is a six month time lag between the American and Canadian economy. Given such a premise it could be a bleak year for Canadians. Gross national product growth forecasts have already been scaled down from four to one or two percent. The knee jerk reaction is to focus all the legislative guns on fighting a recession. But consumer spending in Canada has not fallen off and large wage settlements plus the modest corporate and individual tax cuts in the budget suggest that we may not be as hard hit as the United States. With three quarters of our diminishing foreign trade tied to American markets, this country cannot hope to escape unscathed if the American economy plunges deeper into a recession. Already the U.S. secretary of the treasury has hinted that interest rates may rise again, a fact that would almost immediately be echoed in Canada.

Prior to 1975, inflation frightened the government. Now the worry is recession. It used to be one or the other, now we have both. Inflation is predicted to run at 12 per cent this year and more than 800,000 Canadians were unemployed in January. Little rays of light like a bullish stock market and a drop in the wholesale price index are hopeful signs about lessening inflation and more confidence in the economy generally.

In the final analysis, Turner is right to adopt a wait and see attitude. Canada has a cold. There is no doubt about that. But compared to the pneumonia in other countries, we are not too badly off at

The Demi-God of Sports Or Minds Versus Pectorals

That hallowed altar of public obeisance collectively worshipped as "sports" is coming under increasing fire from a disenchanted public. As usual, politicians are about five years behind their constituents on the issue. While Capoliticians are rarely photographed entering "the church of their choice" anymore, they are always ready to kick a football, throw a ball, or deliver platitudes on the value of "sports."

Following the precedent of the former Social Credit regime, the NDP government spends millions each year on British Columbia's Winter Festival, formerly the B.C. Festival of Sports - which shovelled out money for such oddities as hotel accommodation for Victoria ping pong players playing a mainland tour-

Even that noted iconoclast, Pierre Trudeau, pays homage at the altar. Opening the Canada Winter Games in Lethbridge, he advised us to stop eating garbage, and believe in the values of physical fitness, then we will begin to make a great country. No one can argue with those sentiments, but its easier to achieve these goals when wealthy Liberals build you a swimming pool in your own house and when you have the use of a private lake for canoeing and such.

In most newspapers, up to four pages each day are devoted to "sports." Religion receives one page on Saturday. Adding up all the cops and robbers, westerns, and the deluge of violent competitive team sports on weekend television, it is evident we are a bloodthirsty lot.

Pandering to our weakness, big business organizes elaborate leagues, playoffs, indentured farm systems that buy, sell and trade athletes like so much meat at a slave auction. At the same time, the "meat" is paid exorbitant salaries while it is useful and turned into demi-gods, worshipped by each succeeding generation of children munching on instant breakfasts and growing up to buy the cars the athletes shamelessly sell on

A recent advertisement selling Team Canada's hockey school at Brentwood College this summer is a case in point. One Andre Boudrias says he'll be there instructing, adding: "I'm looking forward to a lot of hustle from staff and students alike. See you this summer.'

Stop for a minute and think of an anthropologist reading this message off faded microfilm 300 years hence. What a learned paper he might write on our primitive culture.

"They were a strange people who invited prophets or shamans to their educational establishments in the warm season, to instruct them on physical dexterity with a curved stick. In the lexicon of the times the prophets warned they expected 'hustle' from students and instructors alike. This could be a veiled warning on the part of the prophet that he expected submission or respect from the worshippers. Conversely, given the penchant for hyperbole these people had in their proclamations, the term might have meant nothing at all."

Of course this fictional vignette depends on a certain amount of enlightenment over the next three centuries something we can't count on after watching Canada-Russia hockey series which appeared to be surrogate wars for many

Only a cretin would quarrel with the concept of a healthy body, healthy mind. But why must we instil in our children this idea of competitive sport mayhem? Governments, universities, service clubs and the school system all play lip service to the demi-god.

At least one school system, that of San Francisco, has become fed-up. The school board dropped all its athletic programs as an economy measure, and because of too much emphasis on winning as opposed to learning

The Greater Victoria school board estimates the value of buildings and equipment at $100 million. While the board says it is impossible to isolate expenditures on athletics we can ask ourselves: how much has been spent on gymnasiums, sports equipment and coaches'

In many school systems, and even in first year university until a few years ago, phys. ed. was a mandatory subject Regardless of inclination, students had to exercise and play games once or

If students are not interested in the subject, two 45-minute periods per week are not going to ensure their fitness. And can't we at least leave one's body up to the individual?

Fitness is an individual thing; it can't be programmed by an institution. Yet there we go telling the children about the values of fair play learned in competitive sports, when all they have to do is turn on the television set to watch football, hockey and roller derby players beating each other up.

And of course the schools reinforce the value of fitness while Olympic skiing stars sell chocolate bars on television.

No wonder up to 40 per cent of the people reaching university are judged semi-literate by their professors in B.C. Learning to read and write well will only present more confusing paradoxes. But judging from the above percentile we should concentrate more on developing student minds and let their pectorals

Racist Overtones

From Vancouver last week, as the federal inquiry into the RCMP held hearings on the force's discipline and grievance procedures and other matters, came a complaint from the public about the racial slurs the RCMP is sometimes guilty of making.

Mun Hope of Surrey said RCMP press statements frequently name minority racial groups either unnecessarily or with an incorrect perspective which damns all members of that racial group.

As an example, he cited the reports of the famous Bangkok connection drug case, in which the RCMP arrested 16 high-ups in the B.C. heroin trade last October. Newspapers and radio stations carried reports that RCMP said most of the suspects were Chinese.

Hope said the published list of those nabbed showed only seven had Chinese names. The rest had occidental names. He also complained that in early statements, the RCMP made little distinction regarding the fact that many of the Orientals charged were foreign nationals, not Canadian Chinese. He complained to the RCMP but was told "the RCMP wanted the public to know it is the Chinese who are bringing drugs into the

If anyone thought Hope was being a trifle ridiculous or complaining about isolated instances, he had only to wait until the next day's news. Newspapers and radio stations in Vancouver carried RCMP-attributed reports that "two East Indian girls" were found slain in suburban Richmond. CBC reported, upon its own authority presumably, that the incident "may have racial overtones," whatever that meant.

When the police finally did identify the two young women stabbed to death, the RCMP admitted one was a Caucasian and the other was a Canadian Indian.

It's no picayune matter, this labelling of victims or criminals by race. For years Orientals in B.C. were second-class citizens. Reports of mine disasters, for example, would give names of the white miners who died, then typically add at the end that a number of Chinese also perished.

It recalls some of the uglier segregation practices of the southern U.S. small town newspapers in Mississippi, for example, would provide news of "coloreds," but under a separate heading from whites.

Now what has the race of a person to do with the fact that he's been arrested or she's been murdered? Does the RCMP automatically think of the East Indian community in connection with all violent crimes it uncovers?

It's an important issue, and in the current uneasy atmosphere about immigrants and different peoples with darker skins and different customs, police and press should not inflame matters with ignorant statements.

Why she came to power is more important. The Conservative party has taken a spectacular and imaginative gamble that Thatcher's particular out look and views will make her Britain's first-ever woman prime minister.

It is reminiscent of the major gamble taken by the party in 1868 when it dumped its prejudices against Jews to make the new leader Benjamin Disraeli.

Based on her past record and pronouncements, she stands for a narrow authoritarian and doctrinaire conserval tism that would not at the moment command wide support in the country. But the very characteristics that have carried her to the top of British politics indicate that she could mutate into a more broadly acceptable figure once she decides that is necessary

Honest Broker

Her lonely courage in being the first to stand against a leader of nine years is not appreciated by the Conservative establishment. They opposed her not because she is a woman but because she represents a section of the party, the right wing, that they feel is out of tune

After Edward Heath resigned, the establishment candidate was William Whitelaw, party chairman, high Tory, genial honest broker and major hope of those seeking a committee style of leadership that would take the centre ground back into Conservative ownership. But the feeling among Conservative backbenchers was that a very clear line must be drawn between the two major parties, that a radical new approach was needed

While the small Liberal party is happy to fall heir to the political centre there is deep skepticism among many Tory backbenchers that the centre really does exist in Britain today.

They say that Harold Wilson has proved in his year in power that you can ceed by swinging well away from the centre. When the 1970-74 Heath government defied traditional free market Toryism in favor of wages and price controls and other manipulations of the economy, it paved the way for a resurgence of the Tory right and the rise of Margaret Thatcher.

Tory backbenchers were also influenced in their choice by the devastating display of sheer competence given by her when she recently became a front ch opposition spokesman on financial affairs. Beside the pleasant, plodding shadow chancellor Robert Carr she glittered, drawing on her early training as tax lawyer to make tough, intelligent points in debate, undismayed by the fearsome parliamentary presence. Labor Chancellor Denis Healey.

Despite Heath's reversal of an earlier cellor, she vigorously fought pending financial legislation in highly-technical committee discussions. She shrugged off Healey's crack that she was "la pasionaria of privilege" with the riposte that he was "plain cheap." The conviction grew among Tory backbenchers that her femininity was irrelevant and that they were watching a

The essence of the Neave strategy was to underplay his growing success achieving support commitments. While Edward Heath's organizers used psychological strong-arm tactics, offending younger backbenchers especially the Thatcher group emphasized the need for change and the sharp, new image of its Thatcher's training in tax law and the chemistry degree she won at Oxford showed themselves in her ability to diagnose and analyze problems then go for an answer. Barbara Gilles, the headmistress of the local high school she attended, remembers being astonished when young Margaret convinced her grocer father she needed elocution lessons to polish up her Lincolnshire accent.

When interviewing her ambitious pupil about what courses she might do in her last year, she was again astonished when Margaret said she might try for a position in the Indian civil service, then unheard-of for a woman.

'When I said that might be difficult for a woman, Margaret replied: all the more credit, don't you think, if you suc-

This will power, and the success it has brought her, may explain why early reactions from British housewives in various regions are that they will not for her. A leading London psychiatrist says such voters feel resentment because a woman like Thatcher shows up their own failings in life.

For a woman who has achieved the apparently impossible, this and other problems are unlikely to be insoluble.

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

Take a hike around some of the trails at Francis Park, for here we find many teresting things happening, owing to the change of climate. A short time ago it seemed as if spring had come. Now the cold stormy weather is back, things look a lot different.

The trees and shrubs look more bedraggled than usual and even some of the plants that were breaking into leaf have withdrawn themselves.

It is something marvellous to see how the trees and shrubs have protected themselves during this latest cold snap. Just a short time ago they were fresh and ready to break out - now they are retarded. What is it that protects them from the frost? They put on a coat of a wax-like substance that protects them. even the terminal buds of the maples which are rather delicate at the coming of spring.

There is one change that is taking place in spite of frost. If you look on the twigs of the Douglas Fir you will see many little reddish buds on the ends. These are the new male cones or flowers that will burst into pollen during the middle of April. The female flowers have not appeared yet.

At this time of the year the lichens are falling from the trees, especially the lung or alligator skin, whichever you want to call it.

When you find it on the ground it seems leathery and tough, but just soak it for a few minutes in some water and it will spring back to life again and show its dull green color on the the top and whitish on the underside.

Take a walk down the climax forest area and here you can see many changes again. Here the frost does not strike so hard and things still struggle to grow in this somewhat harsh environment for most plants. Where you can find the Oregon grape, the flower buds are starting to show color and the few ferns that grow in this type of soil are fresh and virile. It is perhaps because of the little stream that runs through this area. Here the huckleberry did not loose its leaves during the fall and now they

Laws Don't Inhibit

It is obvious that laws will not prevent crimes committed with any type of weapon and to require persons owning any type of equipment or device construed to be dangerous would be impossible. It is the intent which is the thing the law is interested in and most rifle buffs I know are law-abiding people, so why pester them? They are all known by various means now extant, they usually have a yearly firearms license and-or a hunting license, belong to some club such as fish and game clubs, rifle associations, antique gun collectors clubs, shooting clubs, etc.

Anyone who wants to cause trouble will not be inhibited by laws and with a little skill explosive devices can and are being made as we see every day on television and in the papers. - H. F. Leg-

In Wild Kingdom of Bee-Cee, an Unlikely Hero

VANCOUVER — Five minutes into the Vancouver airport, down among the tiny orchids pinned on the bosoms of ladies from Lillooet returning from Hawaii and the Cowichan sweaters strained over the middles of men from North Van out to greet their aged fathers from Regina, the easterner realizes once more that British Columbia is not a province like the others.

Fifty conversations later and it becomes fully evident that this is a subculture of the Canadian experience, the Kingdom of Bee-Cee, a place as self-engrossed as a 15-year-old, as hyped as an old jazz man on hash, inhabited by people who are accustomed to social nuttiness and political hysteria and might be said to thrive on both.

In Bee-Cee there is always a drama in progress. The current hit, which has played off and on in different versions for 20 years or more, is "Will free enterprise overcome the socialist menace before Armaceddon?"

The unlikely hero of the piece (there have been casting calls out for more than two years but nobody better furned up) is the leader of the British Columbia Social Credut Party, a millionaire hardware merchant from Kelowna, who is a man of staggering sincerity commonly called Young Bennett.

Young Bennett. Whose given name is not Young of course but William, is the second son of the former Premier, W. A. C. Bennett. He is 42 and has been in politics for only 18 months. Before that he was minding the store (and the ranch and the sawmill) in Kelowna, because his daddy—whom he calls "the previous incumbent" or "the former premier"—was not yet willing to pass on his title or his

It is Bill Bennett's stated mission to overturn the NDP government and by doing so he expects to restore what his party calls "freedom" to British Columbia after the next provincial election, which he believes could come as early as this spring and almost certainly will occur before the summer of '76.

To understand the nature of Mr. Bennett's mission you have to reckon with who and what he is and where he thinks he's heading. But you also have to know something about the special nature of the B.C. social structure and the peculiarly intense relationships that exist within it, particularly in terms of the business community in Vancouver and the provincial government across the Strait of Executives in boardrooms all over the country howl about the ruination big government can wreak on business but in B.C. the howls are louder primarily because of the nature of the economy. Though there is a small growing secondary manufacturing sector, it's predominantly resource-based, with lumbering and mining as the main industries. Both have a heavy dependency on government action in the determination of their cost structures.

Beyond that, they are industries run ruthlessly by a close-knit business elite of tough men, most of whom are still buccaneering in their attitudes with a concept of capitalism that's not so far from the old "every man a Genghis Khan" philosophy of pre-New Deal free enterprise. Their employees are blue-collar workers who get out and fell trees and dig mines for high hard-won wages and their union leaders are also tough by inclination and necessity so the society is accustomed to confrontation. The polarization it produces filters into politics at every level.

The relationship between the business ellie and the government has been gneasy for years, with the businessmen convinced that any interference with their activities is something of an outrage. Trees are there to be chopped down, copper is there to be extracted, and whoever heard of natural resources belonging to all the people? They belong to the guy who gets the lead out, the guy with the moxie and the money and the proclivity to risk.

With the previous Social Credit regime, although the businessmen never could have been said to be exactly happy, they had at least achieved a modus vivendi. W. A. C. Bennett spoke their language—they didn't control him or like him but they knew how to deal with him. By various wiles he kept them from giving financial aid to either the Liberals or Conservatives provincially, reminding them constantly that if they didn't support the Socreds, they would split the free-enterprise vote and the dreaded socialists would come to power.

This is exactly what happened in the election of 1972, when Dave Barrett's NDP government slid into office on a little less than 40 per cent of the popular vote with the rest split three ways, just as Wacky had always warned. Ever since then, the business community has thrashed around distractedly, seeking first accommodation with the NDP through individual efforts and a series of group meetings that have now petered out.

Gradually, when it became apparent — through legislation such as the Land Commission Act, the recent Mineral Royalties Act and heavierthan-ever government controls in the lumber industry—that accommodation would be difficult, they began to look for a quick escape from the socialist menace in the form on an alternative government.

on an alternative government. Bill Bennett' hopes 'to provide that escape. To do so he's been engaged in an exhaustive, expensive effort over the past 15 months to revitalize his party and at the same time to scupper the semi-serious suggestions that were made a year or so ago for a Majority Movement or Unity Party made up of concerned free-enterprisers from Liberal, Conservative and Socred ranks.

It's been a dogged, careful campaign by a leader who gives the impression of being a dogged, careful man. The Young Bennett is good-looking in the manner of a television actor who gets small parts on The Waltons or Little House on the Prairie, well-dressed, with a healthy tan and puzzled hazel eyes. But there is something eminently forgettable about him. Five minutes after a two-hour face-to-face conversation, it's impossible to be sure that you would recognize him in the Hotel Vancouver's Timber Club dining room among the lunchtime middle managers.

He comes into a room with his new public relations adviser, an Englishman named Davie Brown, who's worked for 14 years with Baker Lovick, the advertising agency that handled the old Socred government's accounts and does work for the forestry and mining industries. Immediately Bill Bennett begins, unbidden, to talk about his "image problem," which he's going to "work on" — it's "the next priority, organizationwise."

priority, organizationwise."
The sentences roll out in an interminable, sometimes incomprehensible flow as he describes the NDP's perfidies and in c o m p etence, the Socreds' difficulties and desires, the B.C. electorate's alarums and diversions, his own deficiencies and ambitions, all expressed in the same abstracted tone of voice and with the same air of slight uncertainty.

slight uncertainty.

He keeps looking over at Mr. Brown as if to inquire, "How am I doing?" and Mr. Brown, who's obviously very kind but also a little worried, keeps nodding in encouragement. Later, a professor at the University of Victoria, who prefers to be unnamed, is o say "Bennett suffers from the kind of relentless dullness than can be produced only in a man who's worked very hard from a very young age under the eye of a dominant Still, despite Bill Bennett's hedging and nervousness, it's possible to piece together from his recital and from further conversations with his advisers an outline of how he proposes to overcome his own and his party's difficulties.

He repeats again and again that hard work has been his lot and hard work is what he enjoys. He was born 20 years before his father became premier and he and his older brother were hustlers from a very young age, delivering papers, pumping gas, working in the family hardware store on Saturdays, sawing firewood, running a truck garden and going into business together as soon as they finished high school, first selling appliances, then with a small finance company and finally in real estate, with responsibilities for a ranch and a sawmill thrown in along the way.

'I've never been a partner or a shareholder with my father and he's never endorsed a loan for me either," he says. His wife, Audrey, worked as a nurse's aide to help finance their first house and he sold it and bought a motel with the proceeds and lived in that for three years, with Audrey working in the office and their sons (who now number four, all in their teens) playing at the door.

"All that time," he says solemnly, "I kept a low profile," and then he repeats a little paragraph to show that he's his father's son (hardworking, God-fearing, family-oriented) but not his father's creature. ("If I hadn't kept a low profile I would have had to disagree with him sometimes and that wouldn't have been very comfortable.")

The last remark illustrates his grave dilemma: how to dissociate himself from the bad old Social Credit without losing the good old Social Credit's votes in the outbacks. When the son was nominated for his father's old seat in the Legislature, South Okanagan, in the summer of 1973, Wacky was quoted as saying in a choked voice, "Happy days are here again"—in two or three years' time the NDP will only be a bad dream." But ever since then he's kept pretty quiet.

To prevent a schism in the party, the new leader avoided drawing up a set of positive policies and now proposes to hold a series of mini-conventions—to get party agreement on a platform.

Later, when asked to explain the difference between this proposal of an amendable platform and the idea that the party might possibly not have any policies at all except to "restore confidence" and "freedom" and raise Mincome payments, one of the Barrett triumphs, an old party hand named Dan Campbell, who used to be a Socred cabinet minister and now is one of Bill Bennet's aides in Victoria, had to think a while. Then he said: "Well, if you're going to have, whadyacallit, participatory democracy, you don't want to be too locked in, do you?"

He was a lot happier when asked about how he's over-coming Bill Bennett's difficulties with an unusually heavy Richard Nixon-ish blue beard which, unattended to, can make him look like a thug on camera. He went to a drawer and pulled out a black safety razor and a box of No. 4 powder. He said Bennett aides haul the leader in for a shave and a face dusting with a powderpuff every four or five hours if they figure he's going to contend with televison crews on his way out of the legislature.

legislature. The Socreds are less forthcoming about the source of their money. The leaders say most of it is from membership dues or from "small individual donations" from the people in the province who love free enterprise.

This winter every household in British Columbia was sent a brochure with å seagull floating in an azure sky over fold after fold of glossy paper imprinted with some unsettling slogans. "The freedom squeeze is real. The fight is on. The fight is yours. It's up to you. Unite in a stance against state socialism" and so on and so on, all non-sequiturs leading to a plea to join social Credit and pay $5 or however much one could afford to rid beleaguered B.C. "of the erosion of your fundamental right to freedom."

The brochure has drawn some heavy criticism, most effectively from Allan Fotberingham, The Vancouver Sun's powerful columnist who somehow manages to be both acerbic, entertaining and liberal all at the same time, and a lot of laughter from some of the electorate, who have called it in a Jonathan Livingston Schmalz brochure. But no one believes this kind of mailing or the large television campaign that's being planned could be financed by $5 or even $25 donations. It's a commonplace in NDP ranks to say that clearly the money is coming straight from the Vancouver Club, where the big businessmen lunch and confer.

When asked whether this was true, a business spokesman in Vancouver said he "did" how exactly." (He also refused to be named apparently you can hold with or object to wild ideas in B.C. at will but in case of the fire next time it's better not to do so in print.)

"One thing I'm certain of," the businessman added, "Bill Bennett could have any amount of money from big business that he needed without having to her a dime."

Then he went on looking a little rueful, as much as a man can when he's sitting in an enormous black leather chair with a corner-window view of Vancouver harbor at his back.

"But you know, I'm not sure money's enough. Dave Barrett has a hold on the imagination of the people in this province despite what the papers say and despite all the hot water he's been into. He's warm. Shrewd. And, my God; he's funny. Bill Bennett's so scared of that wit he doesn't even like to go into the Legislature. If you get the two of them on a platform in a campaign, it will be like putting a boy with a peashooter up against a man who's been firing a howitzer.

for all his long hard life."
In Bee-Cee observers are fond of saying that theirs is a wild politics in which the participants tend to see each others as biggies and baddies or crazies and Commies.

But in Bill Bennett's case, the usual descriptions don't really apply. He may be a front man for biggies and baddies, but somehow he looks and acts like a goody who, ought to be home in Kelowna planning an addition to his motel.

O Canada, Land of Subsidy

A few weeks ago an advertising campaign was launched in the Canadian media, with the sincere flavor usually employed to sell soaps and deodorants. They weren't selling anything; they were giving it away. The adverts appealed to people with ideas to present them (in proper form) to the local Canada Manpower office. As another winter approached, another season of LIP was about to LIP (Local Initiative Projects) can happen around almost anything. If there are trees to be planted, hiking or snowmobile trails to be built, day care centres to be organized and staffed, or any of a hundred other ideas, original or unoriginal, that will "create" jobs (ten is enough) at one hundred dollars a week, the federal government will recognize the business and the honest taxpayers' money will pay the wages which are themselves subject to taxes.

Health care is a provincial matter, and arrangements vary from one province to another. In Nova Scotia a hefty seven percent sales tax (food, clothing and baby blankets excluded) insures health care for residents of the province and insures the medical profession against unpaid bills. A sales tax is regressive, but with the sales fax pre-empted by MSI (Medical Services Insurance) it can't be levied for anything else. The coverage is excellent, and under the Canada Assistance plan the federal government subsidizes health and welfare programs to the tune of fifty percent. This year MSI is to extend coverage to dental care for children and prescription drugs for senior citizens.

Family allowances were raised last year to twenty dollars a month per child from six dollars—and are nowsubject to income tax. Income taxes are of course progressive, so the family allowance is wiped out for any one making $39,000 a year or

Noises are still made in some sectors about free enterprise and the capitalist system, but the welfare state is By JORDAN BISHOP well established, and the welfare of the capitalists themselves has a high priority. In the 1972 election campaign. David Lewis, then leader of the NDP (New Democrtic Party, Canada's voice for democratic socialism), centred his campaign, with florid examples, on "corporate welfare bums." As an entertainment, it was enjoyed by all; but the corporations lost no sleep over it and his opponents yawned and said in effect that tax reform was old

In the 1974 campaign the Liberals, after two years of minority government, won a comfortable majority and settled down to improve a system that provides subsidies for almost everyone, from the corporations to digt farmers to unemployed revolutionaries. The difference may be that while the clusive but real LIP grants are annual, one-shot affairs (a feature that allows for control of any projects that might upset the system), the subsidies for the more affluent sectors of the economy are built in on a permanent basis.

It is hard to imagine anything in Canada that is not subsidized in one way or another. The problem, which Canada shares with most post-industrial societies, has been defined by John Capstick, an economist from Cape Breton Island (in Canada we are supposed to laugh when Cape Breton or Newfoundland are mentioned) as follows: the system for producing wealth is more efficient than the system for distributing it. The Liberals might not define it that way, but their response has been to cope with the problem of distribution on an ad hoc basis.

Some three years ago a Senate Commission on powerty recommended a more perm an ent solution: a guaranteed annual income pegged somewhere below the poverty line. Mr. Trudeau alleged that the country could not afford it. The truth is that it might substitute an efficient means of distributing wealth for the present inefficient ones. It might even put some minor bureaucrats on the receiving end of such subsidies, instead of on the dispensing end. So while the proposal was no more radical than might be expected from a Senatorial Commission, the Liberal response continues to be a myriad of ad hoc measures, subsidies to meet very real needs assumed to be temporary, wiffi only a growing awareness of the fact that many of them must inevitably become permanent.

There are programs for senior citizens ("New Horizons"), programs for ethnic groups centered around the exiciting discovery that Canada is not only bilingual but multicultural. Under the multicultural program folk dancing and crafts have blossomed. A not atypical example is a grant to the Cape Breton Irish Benevolent Society to research and write a history of the Irish in that predominantly Scottish corner of Canada.

OFY (Opportunities for Youth) has been as wideranging as LIP. One group of New Leftists got a grant to produce a tendentious. pamphlet on the turbulent labor history of Cape Breton Island, looking back to the days when Cape Breton miners rebelled against John L. Lewis' international union because it was too conservative. In the '20s miners in New Waterford proclaimed a soviet that had to be dissolved by the intervention of the militia. Today Cape Breton boasts the only socialist MP from East of the Ottawa river — he is a Catholic priest.

A cynic might note that the establishment is alive and well, and that subsidies work much better than militia. The bland tranquillity of most of English-speaking Canada, project an eloquent witness to the success of Liberal strategy—one sometimes suspects that the ad hockery is not haphazard or bumbling, but part of a plan.

Canada is different. Ask any resident draft-resister. It is not as bland as it often appears; but on the whole subsidies are more effective than mace and riot guns—and possibly as deadly. The overall impression is that of a great snake eating its own tail. One wonders if it can possibly last, until, having finished, it turns inside out and starts all over again.

LONDON (AP) - Sir Julian Huxley, distinguished British watching, but he also enjoyed biologist and author, died Fri- swimming and tennis. day night at his London home at the age of 87.

Sir Julian was the older brother of novelist Aldous Huxley, who died in 1963. Grandson of the Victorian biologist Thomas Huxley, a champion of Darwinism, Sir Julian was born June 22, 1887. He was the eldest hoolmaster and editor Leonard Huxley. Sir Julian grew up in an atmosphere of science and cul-ture and his later writings re-flected an enormous range of interests from poetry, religion and philosophy to zoology and ancer research.

He was often described as Britain's "public scientist Ng. 1" for his books and broad-casts trying to explain the achievements of science in plain terms.

Tall, slim, bushy-evebrowed and bespectacled, Sir Julian became in 1946 the first director-general of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

He was knighted in 1958. Sir Julian leaves the former Marie Juliette Baillot of Switzerland, whom he married in 1919, and two sons.

Educated at Eton and Oxford, where he later taught, Sir Julian went to the United States when he was 25 and taught at the Rice Institute, Houston, Tex. for four years.

He referred to himself as a "humanist" and his many books, including 48 major works listed in Who's Who, works listed in who's who, included Religion Without Revelation, The Uniqueness of Man, What Dare I Think? The Science of Life, and Evolution, The Modern Synthesis, which has been called the most important survey on evolution this century.

The loan actually is a line of credit. The Cubans may use it to purchase public health services, pharmaceutical supplies and facilities, and an animal health laboratory.

The CIDA officials said it is up to Canadian businessmen to approach the Cubans about sales.

The loan is the first on which CIDA has charged interest. The agency has made $100 million in loans over the years.

The loan was announced as Canadian efficials prepared

Realty Issues Slow Tax Bill

VICTORIA TIMES, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1975

the government says will curb land speculators were labelled counter-productive by Conservative MPs Friday as the Commons droned through its 13th day of debate on the om-nibus income tax bill.

Flora MacDonald and Sinclair Stevens, the Conserva-tive housing and finance crit-ics, said all the measures will do is drive small developers out of business, aggravating an already serious housing shortage.

A section of the 287-page bill would forbid deduction for income tax purposes of real estate tax and interest charges on undeveloped property held by developers. However, the charges could be saved up and deducted when the land is developed or sold.

Stevens (York-Simcoe) said by developers will not be big developers will not be hurt by the provisions be-cause "they have sufficient other resources and sufficient write-offs to offset for many years whatever will be the implications of this Miss MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands, said the re-sult would depress the housing industry further because small developers "make up about 90 per cent of the in-argument received some support from Liberal Norm Cafik Ontario who said the provisions 'will have a tendency to drive out those small developers who do not have the liquidity to be able to go through the long haul and stay in the business of building houses."

Cafik joined with the Con-servative critics in saving servative critics in saying local bylaws, which involve time-consuming approval of development proposals, are more to blame than land speculation for delays in the rovision of serviced land.

Stevens, disputing comments by New Democrat John Gilbert, said "it is the bureau-cracy that the NDP caucus and the Trudeau Liberal caucus love so much that is the main impediment to the development of serviced land in this country."
Passage of the measures, combined with administrative delays, would add 'between $1,500 and $2,000 to the cost of land before a house can be built on it."

Chiefs, Ministers To Meet

A committee of provincial government cabinet ministers will meet with representatives of the B.C. Union of Indion Chiefs to discuss cut-off lands the week of March 3, Human Resources Minister Norm Levi said Friday;

Levi said he received a telegram Thursday from Adam Eneas, chairman of the union's cut-off lands committee asking for "an unofficial in camera meeting before the end of the month

Purpose of the request, aid Levi, was to "informally discuss claims."

Indians want compensation for some 36,000 acres they claim were put to other uses by the provincial government between 1913 and 1916 al-though they had been designated as Indian reserve lands

Nahmint Valley a Resource Blueprint

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Resource specialists are studying a remote valley near here in what could become a blueprint for resource development.

The federal and provincial governments are involved, along with MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., the giant forest company which eventually will log the valley.

Object of the intense scrutiny is the 75 square mile Nahmint Valley about 13 miles south west of this Vancouver Island city.

The watershed includes the Nahmint River and a five-mile-long lake where there is excellent fishing.

Purpose of the study is to collect an possible information on the valley's resources so that the final logging plan will dotthe least possible damage.

Data is being collected on soils, geology, climate and hydrology and an inventory is being made of timber, fish, wildlife and potential recreational areas.

"All the work now has been done," says study co-ordinator Brian Nyberg of the British Columbia Forest Service.

"We hope to have the planning part done in March when all the agencies involved will get together and make recommendations on where the camp sites should be and things like that."

In addition to the forest service, agencies involved include the fish and wildlife branch, Environment Canada, the department of mines and agriculture and the University of B.C. forestry faculty.

Decision to undertake the study, which began last spring came after a group of Vancouber Island residents wrote to the provincial government.

Nyberg says June 30 is the deadline for forest service approval of MacMillan Bloedel's development plan for the valley.

He says he hopes the company will agree to logging restraints in certain areas of the watershed which the study has found to be critical for wildlife or recreation potential.

If the development plan is approved, a start on construction of a logging road into the valley will probably be made in late summer or early fall and will take several years to Nyberg says the lake will be a popular fishing area because it contains large rainbow trout.

There already is a fishing lodge on floats and several squatters' cabins, but the only access is by foot, boat or signature.

Anderson Galls Pollen With 'Grandstanding'

If anyone on city council is to blame for low morale among civic workers it is Ald, Malcolm Anderson, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

The mayor was replying to a charge by Anderson that part of the reason for the current municipal strike was poor council-staff relations and low morale.

"Ald. Anderson is council's personnel committee chairman and is closer to the civic workers on a dayto-day basis than anyone on council. If there are poor relations with the staff, Ald. Anderson should look to himself first," Pollen said.

"It is galling to me to see Ald. Anderson grandstanding this way and setting himself up as the spokesman for conciliation. We are all trying to end this strike.

Anderson had said council should adopt a conciliatory approach in an effort to end the impasse, although a settlement should not be so high that property owners are adversely affected. The alderman was critical of strong statements by the mayor opposing the pay demands of the employees.

Today, Mayor Pollen said it was easy to talk conciliation but there had to be an original hard stand in order to reach a reasonable compromise agreement.

"We are being conciliatory,
"Mayor Pollen said. "We could end this strike on Thursday (the next meeting) or it could last another three months. A lot depends upon the attitude of the union."

Pollen said he had not de-tected any public demand to end the strike at any cost.

In fact, since the strike began on Jan. 27, he had received about 200 letters and calls about the strike, and the overwhelming majority of calls were against the union's wage demands. Some of the mail was emotional . . . anti-union. I don't pay any attention to that. I am not anti-union. But there is no demand for a quick set-

Unloading banks, wife key?

By STAN DELAPLANE GUADALAJARA, Mexico — In the Monte Cassino bar in Mexico City, I met a Texas banker who assured me that herb doctors in the jungle had cured him of stomach ulcers. Doctors in El Paso said they were going to do him in.
Adious, muchacho!
He said: "I sold the banks.

"Nearly all the herbs are made into teas and they must be steeped for 24 hours. They have herbs for sore eyes. There's a kind of green jelly.

"Well, sir, this Mexican lady in a little town gave me this tea from the bark of a tree. Couple months later I went back to El Paso for tests and those old doctors were amazed! I was cured. And I haven't had a sick day since."

(It occurred to me that unloading a couple of banks and a nagging wife might have had something to do with it. But he gave all credit to the herb tea.)

Resolution on ecology

CP Air has joined 64 other world airlines in accepting the resolution of the World Wildlife Fund to renounce the pro-motion of all travel projects that may interfere with wild nature, particularly expeditions to hunt and kill animals threatened with extinction and listed in the Red Data Book of Endangered Species published by the International Union for Conservation of Na-ture and Natural Resources.

In accordance with this res-olution, adopted in Lusanne, Switzerland, at the 21st meeting of the Board of Trustees of the World Wildlife Fund on November 1, 1974, CP Air will refuse to carry wildlife and wildlife products taken illegally or exported in contraven-tion of the law of the exporting country.

McDonald's The Name; Lacrosse Is The Game

One week's work and the big news of course was the bid for complete co-operation in local lacrosse built around the reorganization of McDonald's, this city's entry in what is now known as the Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League. Which is quite a handle and was only changed in deference to the probable entry of two prairie clubs.

Which may be fine, but the other plan to change the name of McDonalds to the Victoria Junior "A" Lacrosse Club loses something in the translation, for the simple reason that John McDonald, the sponsor, has done so much for the team over the past six years. The Shamrocks once changed names, it will be recalled, and they quickly change back again. Albeit, whatever the name, things are going to be just as keen and experizing as in the past according to general manager. and surprising as in the past according to general manager. Bob Reid.

Bob Reid.

In a quick pre-season analysis for the benefit of players, obviously. Reid said in essence: Burnaby has only lost three players; they will have a few improvements, and we can only hope to come close. Richmond: Lost some players, but always seem to come up with more; will be very capable. Surrey: Moving back to New Westminster, lost some good players. but with new executive and complete reconvariation. players, but with new executive and complete re-organization about Coquitlam.

He also suggested that some of the club's returnees may have a difficult time making the team; and he took a well-aimed swipe at his own executive and lacrosse executives in the crowd when he said:

the crowd when he said:

"It's our game; we've got to get off our butts and put it back where it belongs."

Hugh Reston, president of the B.C. Lacrosse Association, also expressed concern when he said the BLCA was disturbed with the disparity in the class of junior lacrosse between East and West, the East being dominant, having won the Mints Cup 13 times in the past 15 years.

He said the B.C. association was setting up a steering committee to investigate the problem and hopefully come up

Meanwhile, in the post were some interesting statistics and information this week. While Victoria Bate softball team didn't place anyone on the first all-star team in the Northwest International League last season they did put five on the second team. They were Bob Burrows, Stan Kern, Carl Walker, Bobby Holness and Harvey Stevenson. Dave Ruthowsky got honorable mention. Ruthowsky had a 12-6 win-loss mark and an ERA of I.65; Kern was 7-3, and sported an ERA of .59. And proving again, perhaps, that Bate had the best two-men catching staff in fastball (softball) is the fact that the two leading hitters for Bate were Bill James at .306 and Burrows at .302.

And also two harbingers of spring, or summer, even both. And in snowflake time, why not drool a little? First, a message from Westport. That's a fishing resort on the Washington coast where hundreds get their daily limits of salmon and some even stay on much of the summer. And it's also a place where the real fun can start when the tuna comescloser to show them usual as was the case last year, and calmon shore than usual, as was the case last year, and salmon fishermen with relatively light tackle were getting their kicks from the scrappy tuna.

It's quite a spot, Westport, and there are over 350 charter boats available in season, and the cost isn't that high either. For example for a trip of approximately eight hours, the charge is about $23, which works out to $3 an hour which is what you would pay at most boat rentals anywhere. And this way you get a guide thrown in. The tuna, normally, are farther offshore, which means an overnight junket, and that out to the same tariff: $3 an hour or around $75 or $80

Then there was the note from John Buck of Northwest Safaris. John has some steelhead safaris scheduled starting in April for the Chuckwalla River at Rivers Inlet. And if anyfurther information John can be reached at Box Vancouver. In the summer John has the salmon safaris to Rivers, and last year two of his guests came in with dandies, Roy Lisogar a 75 pounder and Mike Gallant a 70-pound lunker. He and his wife, Norma, are perfect hosts

Meanwhile, if winter fishing is indeed great off the Vic toria and Sooke waterfront, we really don't realize just how furtunate we are, do we? And the thought here so often has been: Wouldn't some form of charter business be successful?

Here's the situation as it now stands:

UVic leads with 26 points and can complete the schedule with 28 by winning tonight. Calgary is second with 24 points, Alberta third with 22 and UBC fourth with 20. But Calgary, Alberta and UBC all have two more ames after tonight.

replace the Vikings on top is by sweeping all three of its remaining games, assuming UVic doesn't blow it tonight. In addition to tonight's game at UBC, the Dinos are at home next Friday and Saturday to Alberta. A Calgary sweep would eliminate the Bears, leaving the Dinos first and UVic second.

Winning two out of three would be enough to put Cal-gary in the playoffs but not enough to replace the Vikings on top. Although the two clubs split their four schedule games this season, Vikings outscored Calgary 245-242.

One more Viking victory would also put the pressure on Alberta. The Bears then would have to sweep their remaining games— against Lethbridge and next weekend at Calgary. That would knock out Calgary and leave Alberta and UVic tied with 28 points each. But the Bears would get first place because they beat the Vikings three out of four this season and UVic would be second.

Vikings lacked offensive punch Friday. Outside of Dave Mulcahy, who got hot in the second half and would up the night's top point man with 19, UVio had trouble hitting from outside. The winners shot 52 per cent from the floor but most of it was from floor, but most of it was from close in. Vikings held a re-bounding edge, 33-26, and had only 14 turnovers to Huskies'

Even Winners Are Unhappy With Referee

VANCOUVER (CP) - Both winner and loser had unkind words for referee Ron Wicks after Vancouver Canucks edged Detroit Red Wings 5-4 in the only National Hockey League game played Friday

Vancouver forward Andre Boudrias, assessed a 10-minute misconduct for arguing with Wicks, said after the game that while Wicks is not a bad referee, incidents do happen when he's on the ice.

The Canucks played the last 51 seconds two men short when Vancouver's Bob Dailey picked up a minor and Wicks added a bench minor after Paulin Bordeleau threw his glove in the direction of the referee.

Boudrias then asked Wicks to measure the stick of De-troit forward Danny Grant, but Wicks instead checked another player's stick, turned over from the Detroit bench. When Boudrias and Bordeleau protested, Wicks assessed the misconducts.

The only thing Wicks had "The only thing Wicks had to do was to tell the Detroit bench to give him a stick with the name of Danny Grant on it and measure it," said Boudrias. "That's all I wanted him to do and he gave me a 10-minute penalty for that."

They all played and finished together, as shorty 'spiels,

For the prize-hungry, final winners were determined by a point formula: three for a win, one for each end counted, and a final figure determined by taking one-quarter of the total points scored in the game.

In other words, if a team scores a 6-2 victory and counted on three of the four ends, the winners claim  $7\frac{1}{2}$  points (3 plus 3 plus  $1\frac{1}{2}$ ). The Northridge curlers broke ties by having last end skips throw one rock, but an alternative can to be split

The format allows novice curlers, who previously may never have played any position other than lead, to acquire experience at the other positions.

Each four-end game lasts about an hour. A half hour's each four-end game lasts about an hour. A hair hour's rest allows observation of a sometimes-neglected rule of etiquette — the on-ice rivals come off and "rest" together and become better acquainted.

It's one of the best fun formats available for shorty.

Bill Merklinger, the 1973 Ontario junior champ who is representing P.E.I., in the Winter Games this week, may have opened a can of worms with his protest.

The CCA originally intended to send the Canada Gameswinning rink to the world junior championships at Perth, Scotland, March 17-23. That's one reason the age limit for the Winter Games' competitors was lowered to 19.

Then the Canadian Curling News came out with a story saying that CCA president Bud Olson had announced that Robb King, the 1974 national schoolboy champ from Edmonton, will be the Canadian representative at Perth.

Merklinger has good reason to be upset.

If Olson or even the CCA executive arbitrarily decided on the Robb rink as Canada's representatives to Scotland, then ALL curlers should join Merklinger in protesting the decision. That isn't the way to do it.

The Scotiafund Retirement Plan builds capital for tomorrow and defers income taxes today.

If a happy, secure future is your goal, a sound investment is needed today. And a good retirement plan has to be started as early as possible. The Scotiafund Retirement Plan offers many people a choice of ways to secure the future, and at the same time offers an immediate deferral of tax dollars. Consider these choices

Because of the long term nature of these funds, interest rates are higher than on conventional savings deposits. Rates are determined by prevailing financial conditions and may be changed as often as once a month. Interest, which is tax-free as long as you're in the plan, is calculated on the minimum monthly balance and is compounded semi-annually 2. SCOTIA RETIREMENT DEPOSITS (Fixed Rate)

This option gives you a guaranteed interest rate on your money for five years. Interest is not taxed as long as you're in the plan, and is compounded semi-annually. You can renew the deposit at maturity at the prevailing interest rate.

3. EQUITY FUND Scotiafund buys common shares of Canadian companies. If the value of these shares goes up so does your investment. And while in this plan, you're free from income and capital gains tax. 4. INCOME FUND Scotiafund Mortgage and Income

Trust allows you to participate in a mortgage portfolio. Though little appreciation should be expected in Units of the Mortgage Trust, the aim is high income compatible with protection of invested capital. Income is tax-free until you close your plan. The choice is yours. Find out how Scotiafund

Carlos Castaneda's four books covering his 14-year apprenticeship with a Yaqui In-dian sorcerer in the deserts of the southwest U.S. and northern Mexico are bestsellers which may say something about the state of the North American psyche.

On a superficial level, The Teachings of Don Juan, A Separate Reality, Journey to Ixtlan, and Tales of Power are as enthralling as the Hardy Boys were when we were all 10 years old. More subliminally they ask us to question 3,000 years of Western reason and its relation to the cosmos.

Now this sounds like heavy stuff. It is and it isn't, as Don Juan himself might say in explaining the riddles of his perception.

A graduate anthropological student at the University of Southern California, Castaneda first meets Juan Matus, or Don Juan as he is respectfully known, at an Arizona bus terminal in 1961. At that early time Castaneda was only interested in studying hallucinogenic plants used by Southwest Indians. For reasons that would take up half this newspaper to explain, Don Juan is interested in Castaneda as well, and so the long apprenticeship begins, culminating in Tales of Power where the author becomes a full-fledged sorcerer, able to leap off 100-foot cliffs and transmute his body into an "aware-

Are you still with me? No, this is not a surreal tale of Indian mythology overfaid with Captain Marvel, but purportedly a serious explanation of flourishing sorcery.

Off and on during the intervening decade. Castaneda spent long periods under Don Juan's tutelage learning "the sorcerer's description of the world." Jimson weed; peyode, and the psilocybin mushroom are employed. and the psilocybin mushroom are employed the beginning to alter Castaneda's co

No willing dupe of primitive magic, Castaneda continually questions 'Don Juan's methods and motivations. At times the apparitions, or "other realities," produced by Don Juan's teaching highten the author to the point where he loses control of his bowels and is sick to his stomach. Other times when Don Juan and another sorcerer named Don' Genero make his car disappear and reappear before his eyes — the author's reason refuses to believe what he sees and dismisses the antics as an elaborate hoax."

"Everything that you've witnessed so far has been real and of this world," says Don Juan, "There is no other world . . . You kept a rare control and aloofness as awarriors should; you didn't believe anything, but you still acted efficiently and thus you were capable of following Genero's call. You actually found him without any aid from me."

The explanation was in response to a problem Don Juan and Don Genero had set up for their apprentice. Don Genero walked off into the desert and much later — when he felt the time was right — Castaneda searched him out.

This is no hide-and-seek-child's play, but part of the comprehensive training of a warrion as later events bear out. All the action I can't help but use novelistic terms to describe this book (which may say more than the whole review) — takes place in the deserts of northern Mexico and Mexico City. There Don Juan, the old Yaqui Indian of khaki shorts, appears, as if by magic, in a well-tailored suit.

What follows is the stuff of science fiction. Tailed by an acquaintance he wishes to avoid, Castaneda is pushed through the door of an airline office by Don Juan, only to find himself in a bustling marketplace more than one mile away. The market stalls were not even open on the day Castaneda finds him-

Now what are we to make of that? Was the magical flight to the marketplace some kind of elaborate symbolist joke on the part of the author?

Reason craps out in an instant when it is out of its safe narrow bounds," says Don Given such an a priori basis, anything is possible, and Castaneda's quartet is a remarkable illustration of the premise. But we who were raised on the precepts of Plato, Descarte, Kant, Schopenhauer, etc., have much trouble believing the Yaqui way of knowledge. God knows, we want to, consider ing how our very reason seems on the edge of a world-wide psychosis these days.

In a very real sense our skepticism to-wards Castaneda is much like that of Castaneda's towards Don Juan in the first three

But somehow it is all a little too good to be true. At the beginning of Tales of Power the author confides in Don Juan that he has received letters from people saying he was wrong to write about the apprenticeship, citing the secrecy surrounding eastern esoteric Invariably Castaneda writes of his incredfile experiences in the form of a novel. Later, in dialogues with Don Juan, he tries to all too neat — this erudite desert shaman equally at home jogging endlessly through the desert or ordering an elaborate meal in a restaurant across from Alameda Park in Mexico City.

Everybody wants to be a "warrior," to be "saved." Don Juan is a literary legend, yet no pictures of him have ever been published. What is real? What is sham? Ask Don Juan?

"Do you know that at this very moment you are surrounded by eternity. And do you know that you can use that eternity, if you so desire?" he tells Castaneda.

We all desire to use eternity. Don Juan. And having read all Castaneda's books, including Tales of Power twice, I hope to meet you some day, luminous fibres and all. Caught in my own perceptual bubble, fashioned from a lifetime of doubt, skepticism and cynicism, I want to believe in you, but I can't.

Are We Doomed To Victimhood?

By PAT BARCLAY

Bush Garden, Northrop Frye's remarkable and influential collection of insights and criticism on the subject of Canadian literature, has been reissued by Anansi and is now available in paperback. First published in 1971, The Bush Garden contains a selection of poetry reviews written for the University of Foronto quarterly between 1950 and 1959, and a group of essays on such subjects as narrative poetry, E. J. Pratt. Canadian painting, and critical method.

Thus described, the book may sound of little or no Thus described, the book may sound of little or no interest to the general reader, and it is certainly true that by far its widest appeal will be to the prescribers of Canlit student texts. However (and as "howevers" go, this is a significant one), some of Frye's conclusions about the nature and quality of literature in this country are so honest and fitting that they will strike a responsive chord in any serious reader.

Again and again, Frye reiterates his contention that Canadian writing has a value for Canadians beyond any questions as to its literary merit. ("The literary in Canada is often an incidental quality of writings which, like those of many of the early explor-.ers, are as innocent of literary intention as a mating loon.") Our literature, he explains, "records what the Canadian imagination has reacted to, and it tells us things about this environment that nothing else will tell us." If you've ever read a Canadian author who aused you to experience a personal shock of recogniion, you'll appreciate Frye's point.

Less convincing is his identification of Canada with the U.S. as a "pioneering country". The "imaginative energy of an expanding economy is likely to be mainly technological." he states, and goes on to point out examples of U.S. "exuberance... not in fiction but in advertising; not in Broadway drama but in dian examples he has found.

Yet in the same paragraph he states, "As a rule it maginative efforts." Granted, these words were written in 1956, when Canada was slightly less beleaguered obtuseness towards the reason for the flowering of

. If you will permit me to sound like a harpist on a bne-stringed instrument yet again, I should like to point out that Margaret Atwood's theory of "survival" as the dominant theme in our literature has a great deal to recommend it. (It owes, by the way, a tremen-dous debt to Frye himself.) Now Margaret Atwood is a "political person," which is to say she has an awareness of what is going on in that part of the world unfrequented by poets, and there is a political implica-tion behind everything she has to say in Survival, her thematic guide to Canadian literature When she writes about Seton's Lobo, victimized by man, or Laurence's Hagar, victimized by pride and "imprisoning tradition", she is also writing about Canada, the "collective victim". Canada, in fact, seems doomed to perpetual victimhood because her popular imagination has been colonized as thoroughly as her land and resources. Seen in this context, the theme of "survival" enters a while new dimension, as the recent crop of explicitly "political" novels, which tend to hinge on the question; "Can this nation sur-

Northrop Frye would undoubtedly classify this admittedly myopic focus on political survival as "cultur-al nationalism," which he refers to as an "endemic disease of Canadian life". It is, rather, a preoccupation born of necessity. If a Canadian writer is aware of what is happening outside his study at all, he must know that his own survival as an identity, as well as that of his country, is at stake. If it were not, he would be the more free to concern himself with survival in its broadest sense, for surely the survival of the world to remain apolitical, and to cloister himself within the mforting walls of approved literary tradition, he aping the stand of his own prime minister, who in dulges in the luxury of making speeches about global crises such as overpopulation and famine while his own country, and with it one of the few real hopes for approximent in the lot of mankind, crumbles beneath

The entire action takes place in the line-up and at the petitioner's wicket of some government bureau in the unidentified future (though not so far ahead that the hero can't recall seeing a revival of Marilyn Monroe pictures) a locale that induces the feel ing of claustrophobia that Hersey set out to achieve, but, sadly, very little else. named Samuel David Poynter, of New Haven, who is standing in the block-long line of petitioners to seek more space in his "sleeping-hall," an eminently sensible request since he is allotted an open area of just seven feet by eleven for his private use diate vicinity, his mentally carnal relationship with the him that he never sees her entire face, and the eventual rejection by the emissary of Big Brother who waits in the wicket ahead, comprise the whole of this unlikely fable.

What is a totally unbeliev able story bare of the plaus ibility that made George Or-well's 1984 so chilling, is compounded by an aimlessness on the part of the author that may indicate he simply lacked the discipline to give up on a good idea that was just never working out. ### He Turned Rock From Revolution to Revulsion

By BRYAN HAY

It's tough to find a competently-written book on the rock music scene.

as cerebral perorations weighing a psychological manifesta-tion in a sub-sociological sphere, or you get strung out in a syrupy goo of barely lit-erate hype knocked together by a hack with the same IQ as that of his intended readers. Pens are either dipped in whitewash or venom — usually depending, on the age as well as the proclivities of the author in question.

Here we are lucky. We have book that is neither condemning nor condoning — though the subject is one of more controversial perthe rock world — one Vincent Furnier, better known as Alice Cooper, of the weird eye-shadow, scraggly hair and an act which turned the direction of early seventies rock music from revolution to

One reason for the honesty in the book is that fact that it was not written by a layman but a journalist, trained in objectivity. Another is the age of the author. Bob Greene at 26 is as much a child of the rock generation as are the performers he chronicles in this 360-page, month-long jour-ney through Middle America He can look on the dope-smoking and the casual sex as a fact of life, not as some-thing beyond the ken of human understanding. However, as a writer who does not specialize in covering the rock scene — his primary beat for his Chicago paper is politics—he can look with amazement and find worthy of note the behind-the-scene hassles big business deals, bookkeeper, white-collar attifudes of promoters and man-agers and also the sheer. back-breaking logistics manoeuvrability and n power that takes place to get a road show from one audience to another.

He has also grown up in an 'era when the rock star was

And, as such, he can revel in the brief chance to share it,

Part of the mystique vanishes, though, the longer he stays with the tour. comes an accepted part of the furniture, and people talk with him — not at him, as people tend to talk to interviewers. He also becomes more aware of the differences between the proletariats and the patricians of this strange

The patricians in this case being the performers, the band members who actually work only 90 minutes a day for their fabulous salaries, and the proles being the road crew, the setters-up of equip-ment who put in a 14-hour day before and after a concert for a couple of hundred bucks a week . . . and don't realize that the world in which they are living is just a cardboard and tinsel one without any

The ethereality of the pop world does not escape its cen-tral characters, though, as Cooper himself is quick to point out in one telling phrase: "I'm a Bilko, man,"

'The other' members of the band don't understand the psychology of what we're doing," he continues, explain-ing the themes of violence, gore and necrophilia which have become synonomous with his name. They're all dreamed up mainly by manager Shep Gordon to move a third-rate band called Alice not a performer called Alice Cooper but the whole band — to millionaire status.

the member of the group picked as the focal point and despite the publicity, the aura around him, he just gets an four members of the band and I defy anyone — except the most rabid Alice Cooper fan—to rattle off their names as rapidly as one could name the individual Rolling Stones

As indicated, this is a book not just for rock fan but for anyone. The nonrock fan, perfrom it than a fan - because to him, it will be, a 'venture into a whole new dimension, a real magical mystery tour.

At $11.50, however, it's a pretty expensive trip and this is the kind of thing to hit the paper back racks in less than a year, so better wait until

Mine Tax Judgment Reserved

VANCOUVER (CP) - Mr. Justice David Verchere re-served judgment Friday on an application by counsel for the provincial government to dis-miss, on points of law, an action by the Mining Association of B.C.

The action claims two new acts are ultra vires (Beyond the power) of the legislature.

The application was heard supreme court

The action is against Attorney-General Alex Macdonald, Leo Nimsick, minister of mines and petroleum re-sources, the administrator of royalties under the mineral royalties act and the assessor of land tax under the mineral land tax act, Hart Horn.

The claim is for a declara-tion that the two statutes are ultra vires and for an injunction to restrain the province from collecting taxes under the statutes.

Arguments hinged on the application of the Crown Proceedings Act of 1974, which superseded the Crown Procedure Act. Under the latter, claimants needed a petition of right, to be granted by the attorney-general, in order to sue

The new act requires no petition but says a suit may be brought only against queen in the right of the province and no court can grant

Jobs Available for Those Who Want Them'

Times Staff

There were 22 people looking for jobs at the Canada Manpower office at 9:30 a.m. Friday, mostly young and unskilled.

It was the usual sort of crowd. And they were study-ing the usual sort of job offer-

Among the 150 vacancies were listings for 32 day-workers such as babysitters, 19 cooks and waitresses, 8 of-fice clerks, 8 car mechanics, 7 medical aides and 3 construction workers.

In addition there was a full load of provincial and govern-ment positions.

"The total of 150 represents total number of jobs available right now," said John Atche-son, information director for the Victoria office.

Decade of Spill Damage

What was described as history's second worst oil spill spoiled 40 miles of South American coastline, destroyed the marine life of two tidal estuaries, killed as many as 40,000 birds and ruined the fisheries of the Straits of Ma-gellan for at least a year.

"The effects of this spill will be felt for another decade," said Dr. Roy W. Hann Jr., Texas A and M environ-mentalist who led a scientific study team to the site of an oil spill last summer that dumped 18 million gallons of oil on the Chilean side of the island of Tierra del Fuego

Fine Arts School Promoted

The head of the musical theatre division of the Banff Centre School of Fine Arts arrived in Victoria Thursday to conduct a hectic one-day one-man promotional campaign.

Alexander Gray has been promoting the nation-wide series of auditions designed to recruit singers, musicians, dancers and actors for the summer program at the 43-year-old school of fine arts in Banff, Alberta.

Gray said auditions will be held in Vancouver Feb. 25 and March 30.

He stressed all persons wishing to attend the summer school must apply for an audition.

"The competition will be stiffer this year than ever before," he said.

Last year 1009 students were admitted to the school. But this year only 850 will be accepted, he said.

"We have world-renowned figures on our staff and they simply have not the time to teach intermediate or mediocre-type students."

The summer program runs from July 7 to Aug. 23. The cost of courses averages between $200 and $225. Room and board ranges from $10 to $14 a day.

NEW YORK (NYT) — A new type of urban transit, in which small computerized railway cars give passengers personalized service to their individual destinations, is off the drawing boards and ready for some venturesome traffice plagued community to try out.

According to its designers, the system, dubbed Personal Rapid Fransit (PRT) could be faster, cheaper, quieter, and more reliable and convenient than conventional sorts of transportation, including taxis and private cars.

The system was described recently, at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science here, by its creators, engineers of the Aerospace Corporation of El Segundo, Calif.

PRT differs conceptually from the widely publicized Group Rapid Transit, recently tested at Morgantown, W. Va., in being styled to deposit parties of one to six persons at a multiplicity of possible destinations rather than transporting groups of as many as 25 persons to a small selection of stations.

The PRT cars, only 10 feet long, would be completely automated, moving in a slot on an elevated structure requiring only a three-foot-wide strip of ground space for its supporting pillars.

The cars would travel at 40 miles an hour, only five feet apart at busy periods, with a new type of electro-magnetic propulsion that, with the current reversed, would also be the braking force.

The system has been extensively tested on a model line at El Segundo that is one-tenth of design size.

tenth of design size.

The system's tracks would thread urban areas, with parallel lines only a few blocks apart. The small size of the cars and speed of operation would allow the "stations" to be simply sidings as short as 20 feet situated along the line wherever desired — typically, two blocks apart in downtown areas.

Passengers would insert plastic cards, obtained either for cash or as credit cards, in typical community.

The Aerospace Corporation is a nonprofit organization—an engineering spin-off from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration—and does no manufacturing.

Dr. Irving said the next step in the development of the system would involve a $15-million investment by an interested entity in a half-mile, full-scale test line, which would take two and a half years to complete. If the tests proceeded successfully, a 20-mile line could be in operation in three more years, he

"We are convinced that citywide PRT is the wave of the tuture," Irving said.

Book Tells How to Knit Raglans

"Raglans Unlimited" is a book of concise and simple knitting directions for all basic raglan sweaters: Pullovers and Cardigans, with a choice of Round, Turtle or V neck: even a choice of long or short sleeves in the lighter weights of yarn. As a matter of fact, you can make 416 different sweaters from this book without repeating!

This book gives all patterns worked from the neck down—the very popular method of knitting raglans which has heretofore been so hard to find in a range of sizes and for different weights of yarn. As most knitters know. or will be delighted to discover, this method of knitting a sweater gives a finished garment that requires an absolute minimum of finishing or putting together and eliminates entirely the necessity of "setting in" sleeves—a task which so many knitters find objectionable.

Instructions are given for all sizes ranging from 2 through 52. There are very few knitting instruction books available with these larger sizes for any style or type of sweater, much less ragians.

Also: the instructions are given for four different weights of yarn; fine weight fingering yarn, medium weight sport yarn; heavy weight knitting worsted and also for the bulky weight.

Directions are written so that a complete sweater can be made without turning a page, with none of the usual tracking down of bits and pieces of information from page to page, to be put together like a jigsaw guzzle. This should appeal to the most experienced knitter, as it certainly will to the novice—and all degrees of skill in between.

"Raglans Unlimited" is not available in stores and can be purchased only through the mail by sending $2.00 (postpaid) to KNIT'N NOTION (Dept. D-30)

By ELEANOR BOYD

Declaration Sunday of the first Vancouver Island synodal assembly since 1896 will signal all 38,000 Catholies in "Diocese of Victoria," to actively help set their Church's goals.

In retreats, seminars, and both large and small discussion groups stretching over at least six months, parishioners will experience a "religious awakening and renewal" and give one to their diocese as a whole, says assembly secre-tary general Father Gerry Herkel.

An official proclamation of the event will be posted on doors and bulletin boards in the approximately 30 Catholic parishes of the diocese.

Bishop Remi J. De Roo issued the document and by tradition must officially call his diocese to the assembly. Island gathering, it was a common event, sometimes held even once a year.

The Bishop wants people to be more than spectators, though.

He is inviting parishioners to facilitate in many ways. Helpers are needed in all facets of the organization.

As De Roo reminded diocese members recently, "You and I have received talents or gifts from the Holy Spirit.

"It is our privilege to place these gifts at the service of the Church for the building of God's Kingdom in society."

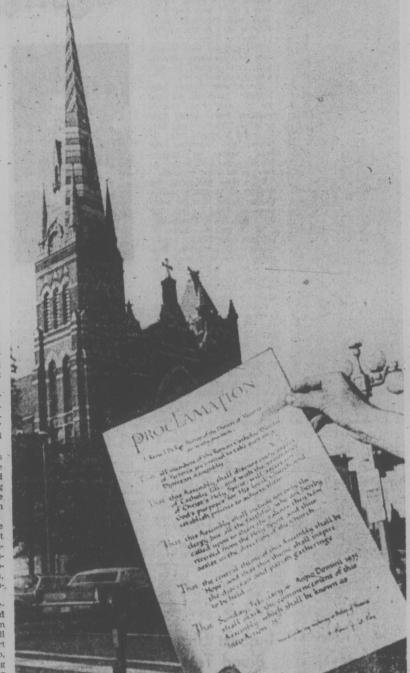

A session for people interested in helping will be held Feb. 21, 7:30 til 10 p.m., at St. Edward's Parish, Ruhmkorff will direct that session and impart management knowledge he has used with such groups as the Poor Clares, Benedictines, Sacred Heart Sisters and Passionist

"The difference lies in the fact that our Assembly is not a Synod or Council . . . and instead of only clergy or bishops participating, every bap-tized and confirmed person, man, woman, or child, is in-vited to take part," he said.

The non-denominational gathering is required of no-body at the Fishers' Ser-viceMaster Co., but Ed Fisher says most of his firm's 25 employees take part regularly.

ServiceMaster Industries Inc., with 1,000 North American franchises, was founded by Marion Wade, who took the name as a shortened ver-"Service to the Master," Fisher said.

It is a goal that keep the Fishers going.

"I have three loves, My God, my family and my voca-tion," says Fisher. "We're working to serve the people. We're not in it just for the Ed Fisher was a pickle salesman working in Adrian until 1968, when he and Mrs. Fisher decided to start the cleaning business. Until this year, the franchise operated out of their home in Jackson.

"Salvation" came in 1971 for the Fishers, he said, through the inspiration of Mrs. Wade, whose ServiceMaster motto is, "If you don't live it, you don't believe it."

Preston: The Holy Hustler

BILLY PRESTON.

. . . going on road

I first started playing with the Beatles, some of the brothers and sisters were saying that I'd sold out and asked what I was doing out there with those 'white boys.' Over a period of time they've come to appreciate the fact that at least a brother was in there.

"What I want to do per-sonally is something that will reach everybody, so I'm going to do a gospel tour and take my mother, my sister and her choir along, possibly in March. It's going to be like a big production."

Reared on religious music, Preston has always managed to include a gospel number or two on his albums. Now he's wondering how live gospel will appeal to his white fans — most of whom are unfamil-

"I think they'll like the music," he predicted hopefully. "They might not understand the religion, but they only have to feel the music.

"I've got no doubts or qualms about it," he went on confidently. 'People should see something new because they always come expecting the same old thing. We'll give them both. I'm not going to .. the God in me."

This patience born of holiness is something Preston takes very seriously, but he's a hustler under the skin.

Blessed with "Nothing from Nothing," his fourth gold single in three years, Preston suddenly took valuable time to join old friend George Harrison for a lengthy tour. He wound up "carrying the load"; saving the faltering concert series from losing momentum on many occasions.

Still, some questioned the wisdom of Preston's participation in the Harrison tour, especially when his own star was rising. But he explained:

"If I go out alone, wouldn't draw half the peop even with a Number One record. If the main thing is to be making money and be reaching people, then why not on this tour? It's perfect and really the only smart thing." Visibly fighting exhaustion between afternoon and evening Harrison shows in Los Angeles, when we spoke with him, Preston tried to relax in one of the Forum's myriad, tiny press offices.

tiny press offices.

He has no intention of resting. Instead, he was looking forward to taking his own tour on the road — hopefully this summer. Although no longer backed by the all keyboard God Squad, he predicted the concerts will contain a few major suppriess.

few major surprises.

"Playing with Tom Scott,
Robben Ford and the others on the Harrison tour made me realize what kind of band I'd like to be with," he explained "I want to play with guys who can share the load. Guys who have a reputation but haven't really been seen.

"Each time everybody gets together and we do a tour, then we're helping each other out. Black artists, for the most part, work harder and for less than white artists. & damnation, just rejoicing."

Despite his four hit singles ("Outta Space," "Space ("Outta Space," "Space Race," "Will It Go Round in Circles" and "Nothing from Nothing"), Preston has had "I know I'm looked at that way," Preston conceded, "but they don't know where I'm coming from. I think I've always been mysterious to everybody. They can't put the two together. But I don't feel bad about selling mostly singles, though I'd like to do more with my albums." Preston's most recent re-cording work, however, again involves others — mainly the Rolling Stones, with whom he is now working in Rotterdam. He also hoped to be involved in an album with Mick Jag-ger, but did nothing to confirm rumors that it might be Jagger's long-awaited solo Preston's ambitions they can be called that — don't end there, He talked about 1974's rash of group reformations and, as he prepared to leave the dressing room to ready himself for the evening performance, the subject turned to the Beatles. "Their getting together is not a reality now because if they'd get off doing it, then they'd do it!" might be instrumental in get-ting the Fab Four back into the studio together — though not necessarily on an album of their own.

"It would be nice to see an album and a tour. Then they could break up and do their own things again, but get together occasionally to support each other's individual pur-suits. That would be an event, and that's what I believe will happen. I'll definitely be invit-ing them all in to play with me on albums, whenever time

Vernon Wins Regina Post

cian who graduated with honors from the conducting school of the Vienna State Academy in 1970 has been appointed music director of the Regina Symphony Orchestra and Philharmonie Chorus.

Timothy Vernon is now conductor of the Amity Singers in Victoria and music director and conductor of the profes-sional Columbia Orchestra in than 30 applicants for the Regina post by an almost unanimous vote of the 40-member

Vernon is happy with the circumstances surrounding his appointment, which include a new young Canadian concert master and a new manager who is experienced as an assistant with a major U.S. orchestra

For his guest appearance in Regina January, Vernon conducted the Mozart Symphony No. 39, and with Tsuyoshi Tsutsumi as soloist, the Tsutsumi as soloist, the Dvorak Cello Concerto, both critical comment.

Among the satisfactions Vernon feels in achieving the Regina post is the thought of working in the handsome Centre for the Performing Arts whose acoustics he describes as "absolute perfection."

In prévious press releases he has been referred to as a Vancouver musician but in truth, while born in Van-couver, Vernon received all his musical education before going to Europe in Victoria.

He revealed a considerable musical precocity as a child and was for many years solo treble and head chorister at Christ Church Cathedral.

In 1958 he sang the role of Amahl in the first production of Menotti's Amahl and the and choirmaster of two Vic-toria churches and on entering UVic was appointed conductor and musical director of the university chorus, motet choir and madrigal singers, undertaking many successful concerts with these groups.

His decision to seek a conducting career became firm when he began intensive study of the art with Otto-toria Symphony conductor who is now with Yale University School of Music

In 1967 he entered the Vienna State Academy for Music and the Performing Arts where, among others, he studied with Hans Swarowsky, Joseph Mertin and Frieda Valenzi Alea during these years. lenzi. Also during these years, he attended courses and semi-nars in France and Austria

Superstars of the Musical Concert Stage

When Franz Liszt was giving recitals, in the 1840's, ladies would faint, strong men would turn pale and students, after the performances, would drag the hero through the great pianist. He also was one great pianist. H ealso was one of the greatest showmen ever to set foot on a concert stage. Vladimir Horowitz, who gave his first New York concert in six years - a few weeks ago, is not that kind of showman not on the stage, at least (though his return was as crrefully brehestrated as a Ravel scores. He sits quietly at the piano, letting his fingers do the work. Yet the atmosphere in the hall on Nov. 17, one imagines, resembled that of a list cover in the variationary. citement was too much for one listener in the dress circle, who passed out.

It is given to very few artists in any generation to come across this strongly to the public, Karajan and Bernthe public, Karajan and Berlistein have that kind fo charisma. Callas had it. Among pianists, Rubinstein and Richer have it. Rostropuvich has it to a greater degree than any cellist in history. A mo'ng active singers, Fischer-Dieskau exerts a mightly spell. These musicians come on stage wrapped in a mysterious aura. They do not have to work on it, they Melba, Rachmaninoff, Hof-mann, Toscanini and Heifetz had it in a previous generaflamboyant personality. The dour, quiet, unsmiling Rach-maninoff seldom gave interviews and was not exactly a matinee idol. But when he put his hands on the keys, something happened, and audi-ences were driven into a frenzy. It also has happened frenzy. It also has happened that skill per se has nothing to do with the case. Certainly Paderewski, especially in his later years, could not get through any piece without stumbling. But to the public he was the very incarnation

Admittedly Paderewski was an exception. By and large, the supreme heroes and heroines of the musical public get where they do because they have the skill to paly or sing in a unique manner. They do certain things better than anybody else: They also have the mysterious X factor.

be taught. These superheroes there are exceptions). They were born with certain skills, of course. All important pianists and violinists showed when they were 5 or 6 (singers naturally have to wait until post-puberty), and a tiny handful of them went on to conquer the world. They had the X factor and were the fortunate ones. For one reason or another, they shone brighter than their contemner through their own orbit, pushing aside everything else. Yes, there are legitimate complaints against the star system. But nobody has come up with a viable alternative. There are certain kinds of music where a star is essential, if only for the simple rea-son that no other singer around can handle a certain of Eames, Melba and Elman. There are a few throwbacks, but the level of musicianship voices around equivalent to those of the young Caruso, Melba, Destinn, Slezak, Mel-chior and about 50 others one could mention? Are there more tabulous technicians than Heifetz and Hofmann?

Music lovers, backed up by the evidence of records, can and do argue the subject far into the night. They are, of course, hotly discussing superstars then against superstars now. Like it or dislike it, the superstar has always been with us and will continue to be with us. Our musicians are paid but even the principals who bear responsibility for their sec-tions are not paid much more than a token fee in comparison to what they could earn elsewhere.

As for the rest, they earn no more and perhaps less in a year than a teen-ager with an after-school job. It is humiliating to have to admit that we hear as an echo of Victoria's small-town past the implication that because musicians enjoy playing it is un-reasonable for them to expect to be compensated financial

It seems to have escaped many people's understanding that the orchestra has matured and improved in direct ratio to the availability of qualified musicians who by combining their earnings from two or three sources are able to live here on an income they could expect to earn in other places

They are, I suppose, fortunate to be able to enjoy life in Victoria, but they could not realistically afford to do so without the situation that offers them double or triple appointments from orchestra, university" and conservatory

* * * Let's be factual about it. We need them far more than they need us. They are the givers, we the receivers and embarrassingly unable to meet our obligation in a proper manner.

In fairness to the musicians one should balance the discussion of economics by stressing that these people are all dedi-cated artists whose profes-sional discipline is enriched by loyalty and keenness

All sorts of inexpert opin-ions have been expressed with regard to the finances of the Symphony Society. Opinions have been 'put forward that the season should be retracted from the present 12 pairs of concerts to the former eight

This is artistically non-via ble. With only eight pairs of concerts you have several months when the orchestra is on the shelf and there is no way you can keep good players on such a schedule

Even if you could keep the layers, the all-important players, the all-important matter of ensemble perform ance deteriorates drastically if the orchestra is idle over too long a period

The proposal, part of Eskimo land claims, was made this week at Frobisher Bay where the Inuit Tapirisat of Canada Eskimo Brotherhood is holding meetings to firm up their demands.

The new territory would be called Nunavut (Our Land) and roughly would consist of the Arctic beyond the tree line. The brotherhood said the boundaries of the territory should be finally determined by negotiations scheduled to start in March between the federal government and Iruit

GOV'T TO FIGHT FOR CONSUMER

The provincial government's department of consume services has come to the aid of a Vancouver man being sued for refusing to accept furniture he ordered.

Better Value Furniture, a division of Value Industries Ltd., 6464 Fraser, has launched a suit against John Diomis, 6445 Elgin, claiming breach of contract.

For the first time the department's lawyers have opted to defend a consumer under a section of the Trade Practices Act which specifies that if the director of trade practices is satisfied there's good cause for defence or action public interest, it may act.

The department will argue that the furniture firm made deceptive representations regarding the quality and character of the goods sold him.

The suit was initiated following Diomis' order for furniture with a list price of $3,000.

The Vancouver man paid $100 down on the furniture by way of a certified cheque and agreed to pay the rest on delivery.

In the interval Diomis decided against the furniture and he refused to accept delivery.

Trial date in Vancouver is expected to be set by the court

Alberta Shuts Door On B.C. Jobless Flow

By KIT COLLINS Times Staff

Alberta doesn't want any more of B.C.'s employable welfare recipients, according to B.C. Human Resources Minister Norman Levi.

The minister said Canada Manpower officials in Alberta have scuttled the program which offered $160 "exploratory grants" to employables to canvass job opportunities in other centres.

The project was sponsored jointly by the B.C. human resources department and Can-ada Manpower here.

Levi said the program "has come to a complete halt" as far as welfawre recipients are oncerned. "Manpower people in Alberta were upset and contacted us. They felt that we were move ing too many people around — when we were only responding to what appeared to be a demand," said Levi.

The program was started last fall to allow some leapfrogging when Canada Man-power reported 3,500 open jobs in Edmonton's office alone, compared to some 300 listings here.

Over and above the initial grant, Manpower was willing to pay for relocation of the family if the applicant succeeded in finding a job.

Full-Scale CTC Probe Launched on B.C. Tel

The federal government has agreed to launch a full-scale inquiry into the inter-corporate relationships and purchasing practices of the B.C. Telephone Company.

In light of this development Transport Minister Bob Strachan said Friday the provincial government will drop its appeal against a B.C. Tel rate increases averaging at 4½ per cent which will take effect

"We face up to our problems and try to take corrective action," Ney said, adding that the city offers a reward to anyone with information leading to the arrest of vandals.

Ney said the city now has a methadone clinic and a drug education pro-gram to help deal with the heroin problems.

If anyone on city council is to blame for low morale among civic workers it is Ald. Malcolm Anderson. Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

The mayor was replying to a charge by Anderson that part of the reason for the current municipal strike was poor council-staff relations and low morale.

Anderson had said council should adopt a conciliatory approach in an effort to end the impasse, although a settlement should not be so high that property owners are adversely affected. The alderman was critical of strong statements by the mayor opposing the pay demands of

Few home gardeners have a professional kit of pruning tools, instead we make use of such carpentering tools as we have on hand. These will do a good job providing they are clean, well oiled, and properly sharpened. Dull and dirty do more harm than

The basic rule in pruning is that you prune to make a plant larger and stronger. The more you cut off the more new growth the plant will make. So we prune young trees severely, as outlined above, to make them strong and cample of bearing a good and capable of bearing a good crop of fruit without suffering mechanical damage.

After the tree is about six After the tree is about six years old and bearing regularly, pruning is restricted to shortening lateral growths and removing all growths that cross each other and those which tend to crowd the centre of the tree.

and dry a little for about 10 From six years on, pruning is kept to a minimum because we no longer need a rapid increase in size. The aim now is to obtain a certain amoun of new growth each year and to encourage the formation of fruiting spurs or flowering > not be licked into shape in one pruning. The work has to be planned carefully and spread over five years, otherwise the tree will produce quantities of long whippy growths and will provide little fruit.

A 4.5 to six metre tree (15 to 20 ft.) that has been properly handled from the day it was planted, should not require more than 20 minutes

In the home garden, summer pruning is more desira-ble than winter pruning, since it does not encourage so much new growth. The tree also re-mains smaller in size because the reduction of leaves results in less food being made at a time when surplus food, not needed for swelling fruit, is converted to wood growth which is removed during

The Cost of Music

pertaining to the symphony dispute that have invaded newspaper columns over several weeks misunderstanding or ignorance of the facts has

It would be impossible in one column to comment on all these errors and distortions, but some have been reiterated often enough, both in letters and conversation, to warrant analysis.

To begin with the question of remuneration. As one writ-er put it the musicians "are paid and paid well . . . " True even the principals who bear responsibility for their sec-tions are not paid much more than a token fee in comparison to what they could earn

As for the rest, they earn no more and perhaps less in a year than a teen-ager with an after-school job. It is humiliating to have to admit that

And it is infuriating when we hear as an echo of Vic-toria's small own past the implication has be ause mu-sicians enjoy playing it is unreasonable for them to expect

These musicians are as much professionals as doctors or lawyers. One of the major differences between them and and the ability to sustain the pressures of professional per-

And the pressures are there. People who qualify to be inembers of an ensemble that plays as well as our symphony now does don't main-tain their standard on concerts and rehearsals alone

They practise. They are at their instruments for as many hours a day as they can find away from teaching or other responsibilities

They are at a never-letdown tension during concerts and rehearsals. They must look after their instruments, most of which are as sensitive as a living organism to various conditions and have to be pampered, doctored, have money spent on them.

All these factors can only be successfully coped with by someone who has invested years of rugged - yes, rugged - work in thousands of hours of practice and study as well as many thousands of dollars in tuition and exami-nation fees, and purchase of music and instruments.

Why should anyone expect that such a person should not reap at least as full a harvest for his work as the one who, having dropped out of school,

It smacks of the 19th century Calvinistic notion that it is sinful to enjoy things, let alone be paid good money for pleasure. The implication of moonlighting is behind various mutterings concerning the fact that many of the players "have good jobs at the university" '(one letter writer says "all earn their living else-where").

Of course they do. If this were not so we would have very few players of substantial quality.

It seems to have escaped many people's understanding that the orchestra has matured and improved in direct ratio to the availability of qualified musicians who by combining their earnings from two or three sources are able to live here on an income that at least approaches what they could expect to earn in other places.

They are, I suppose, fortunate to be able to enjoy life in Victoria, but they could not realistically afford to do so without the situation that offers them double or triple appointments from orchestra, university and conservatory * * *

Let's be factual about it. We need them far more than they need us. They are the givers, we the receivers and embarrassingly unable to meet our obligation in a proper manner.

In fairness to the musicians one should balance the discussion of economics by stressing that these people are all dedi-cated artists whose profes-sional discipline is enriched by loyalty and keenness.

All sorts of inexpert opin ions have been expressed with regard to the finances of the Symphony Society. Opinions have been put forward that the season should be retracted from the present 12 pairs of concerts to the former eight

This is artistically non-via-ble. With only eight pairs of concerts you have several months when the orchestra is on the shelf and there is no way you can keep good players on such a schedule.

Even if you could keep the players, the all-important matter of ensemble performance, deteriorates drastically if the orchestra is idle over too long a period.
